

Product Development Director, C Carley

Whether apparel or home furnishings, Carley's expertise is knowing how to develop your environmental products from start to finish.

Carley's interest is living green in all forms. She continuously educates herself to consult others. Sourcing results may include designer, graphic designer, illustrator, pattern maker, sample maker, technical designer and sewing contractor.

Carley is a California woman who manages her consultation company in San Francisco. She advises by telephone, but is available to meet personally in the bay area.

Carley is a 1987 graduate of the Otis Art Institute of Parsons School of Design in Los Angeles. The college is considered among the top ten of art institutions nationwide and one of the top four fashion institutions in the world. Carley's experiences total more than 23 years in apparel and home furnishings product development. She is involved with numerous admirable organizations.

Carley's work for Patagonia was a circa 1991 milestone that enhanced her career and consciousness. Her knowledge of organic fibers expanded in 1994 through advisory projects. Location experiences grew from west to east coasts. She became active in many local to international nonprofit associations ranging from Green Peace to the California State Park, Youth at Risk Foundation, and Fashion Group International.

Carley's mission is to provide exceptional client satisfaction through direction and encouragement with valuable quality resources.

Email Carley@ChicEco.com with your interest and query.